

ARMOUR SENDS A SPOOF TO THE JOURNAL FOR INFORMATION.

Emissary Pretended To Have Come From Washington as a Representative of a Law Firm Friendly to General Miles—Dolan May Go Before the Court of Inquiry.

The Armours with their offers of bribery, their clumsy sleuths and their wild attempts to undo the injury done them by Thomas Dolan's remarkable affidavit published exclusively in Saturday's Journal, have thus far failed to disprove a single charge made by Dolan or to remove the grave suspicion under which they are held by the American people.

In their desperation they have sent one of their men to the Journal office under the guise of being a friend and champion of General Miles in his fight for the soldiers who were forced to eat Armour's infamous product.

The young man who undertook the task of gathering information from this office came with his lips schooled in misrepresentations and falsehoods. In the blindest possible manner he protested that his only object was to aid the Major-General of the Army of the United States; that he represented an influential firm of Washington lawyers who for political reasons were compelled to work under cover so as not to offend the Administration. This man came directly from the New York offices of the Armours, and his sole motive was to secure the address of Thomas Dolan, which information could just as well have been had by reference to any Boston directory for the year 1898, which contains exactly what the visitor sought. The whole performance at sleuthing was crude in the extreme. He left the Journal office no wiser than when he came.

In the meanwhile Thomas Dolan is busy trying to escape Mr. Armour's agents who have pursued him unceasingly with the hope of "fixing things up," to use Mr. Charles Roberts' language. Dolan is firm in his purpose and refuses to deviate one whit from his affidavit, which under oath charges the Armours with having killed and sold great quantities of diseased beef to the people of this country somewhere between the years 1885 and 1895, when Dolan was killing superintendent in the polluted Chicago stock yards.

What the Armours have to say in refutation of these accusations is still a mystery as deep and unfathomable as the diabolical compound with which they are charged with having embalmed their evil product.

Mr. Philip D. Armour has some very crude and clumsy men in his secret service bureau. Several of them have called at this office during the last two days for the evident intention of extracting whatever information against the packers is in the possession of the Journal.

Perhaps the crudest sleuth sent out from the Armour encampment was a young man who represented himself as a Mr. Williams, who made the fatal mistake of writing his name with one of Armour's indelible pencils in the handwriting of a telegraph operator. Mr. Williams was admitted promptly and permitted full swing.

He was a rather spare young man, wearing glasses, through which his eyes shined nervously. A somewhat long nose, sharp at its peak and bent at the base, protruded from a sallow countenance. He made a masterful attempt to exhibit composure and rubbed the perspiration from the palms of his hands on his trousers. A hand came to him, to his aid at intervals and seemed to assist him in a series of artless lies as to the cause of his coming and the desires he had.

"My object in coming to you," he began, glancing furtively around the room, "is to secure the address of Mr. Thomas Dolan, the gentleman who made the startling affidavit in this morning's Journal. It is the most terrific arraignment I have ever read. We are anxious to summon Dolan before the Court of Inquiry and—"

"Who is 'we,' Mr. Williams?" was asked of the visitor.

"Well, I don't mind telling you that I am from Washington, and that I represent a law firm, a very powerful one from a point of financial standing. We are anxious to summon Dolan before the Court of Inquiry and get these revolting accusations on the record."

"Do you bring any credentials?"

"No, I realized the danger of my mission and it would be fatal to my presence were known in this city. I have come all the way from Washington to see you, and it is of the utmost importance that we find Dolan at once."

"Have you no means of identification? Mr. Dolan's address is a professional secret, and we are anxious to disclose it to any one, and least of all to a stranger who comes without evidence of his good intentions. Do you know Major Lee, General Miles' counsel?"

"Oh, very well. Very well, indeed. I have had several conversations with him," responded the visitor, in a sly, crafty way.

"Would you object to describing him, or to making some sign or uttering one word by which we will be assured of your acquaintance?"

"Now, look here, my dear sir, I am in a very delicate position. I was instructed by my firm not to disclose anything about Mr. Dolan's address, but I have gone too far. I must refuse to answer any more questions. If you know what needs to be represented and how important it is to General Miles that we get Dolan's address, it would simply paralyze you." Mr. Williams leaned forward confidentially and whispered: "We want to help the old 'killing' superintendent, and do it so as not to offend the Administration."

It was simply transparent to the expression of confidence in Mr. Williams' face after he had unfolded that. He was sure it would be matter of time before he would be able to get the address of Mr. Dolan, so he continued, "before coming from Washington, so that there would be no possibility of discovering from where I came."

Unfortunately, Mr. Williams forgot to leave his indelible pencil and his telegrapher's chronograph at home when he decided to sleuth around the Journal office.

"Does Dolan know anything more?" he inquired, nervously.

"Considerably more, all of which will appear in the columns of this paper from time to time. If you don't get the Journal you don't get the news."

Williams rose with a pained expression on his face.

"You can't give me his address, then? Remember it is for Miles' sake that I ask it. Can't you trust me?"

"Not under the circumstances, Mr. Williams. And we deeply regret it. You look honest, and it is an unusual privilege to be placed in. But there is no alternative."

Mr. Armour's sleuth retired thereupon, covered with confusion, after promising to return Monday morning at 11 o'clock. But he never came after that.

Mr. Williams had other duties to perform. Those duties consisted of rushing to a telephone where he called up Mr. Robert Connors, one of Mr. Armour's factotums in New York. What he said to Mr. Connors in substance was that "this man Dolan is the key to the situation. He must be handled some way or other. He is the dangerous man to our interests, and no time must be lost in finding where he is. The Journal of this morning reports him as being somewhere in the outskirts of Brooklyn—in Alston, I believe. I can get no information from them as to his exact address." That was about all Mr. Williams had to report to his chief, who in turn called up Mr. Ogden Armour, of Chicago, to whom he related the facts, advising him that more was to come from the old "killing" superintendent, and that something must be done quickly.

Mr. Armour advised a trip to Europe for Dolan; a trip abroad—Australia, India or any old place. "Get Dolan out of the way, and do it as soon as possible. We realize that he is dangerous to our interests, and no time must be lost in finding where he is. The Journal of this morning reports him as being somewhere in the outskirts of Brooklyn—in Alston, I believe. I can get no information from them as to his exact address." That was about all Mr. Williams had to report to his chief, who in turn called up Mr. Ogden Armour, of Chicago, to whom he related the facts, advising him that more was to come from the old "killing" superintendent, and that something must be done quickly.

did call on him, that he did offer to "fix things up" and that Dolan declined to discuss the situation beyond verifying all the charges made in his affidavit to the effect that diseased meat was sold and canned and cut up and sent out to the open market from the Armour establishment in Chicago during the greater part of the ten years that Dolan was "killing superintendent."

PACKERS STILL AFTER DOLAN.

Boston, March 6, 1899.

Editor New York Journal:

I am kept busy of late because of the activity of the packers. They seem to have the impression that I can be silenced and that the influences they have wielded so long can be made to reach and hush me. I have no intention of deviating one whit from my original affidavit to the New York Journal of Saturday morning. Mr. Ogden Armour's interview in which he says I was discredited in no wise a defence for his acts. Furthermore, it will be observed that an attack on me does not improve or answer any of the specific charges I made, all of which are wholly true. If the United States Government, through its court of inquiry now sitting at Washington, is anxious to find out just what sort of a gang it purchased beef from for the soldier, I stand ready to answer a summons at any time.

Armour and every man in his employ knows that I have made affidavit to simple truths, and that I, above all men, know more about it than any other man at most anybody else in his employ.

Governor Altgeld says in his interview that he believes the inspection there now is very thorough. Perhaps it is. But during my term it was not.

When Mr. Roberts made an appointment with me to meet him at the Boston Tavern Sunday afternoon at 2:30 he thought I would keep the appointment, whereas I only agreed to it so he would get away from my home, as his presence and his purpose alarmed my wife and family. Instead of meeting him myself I sent a friend with the information that I was ill and could not see him.

The gentleman who informed him of my illness pretended to be my brother, Jack Williams, and he said that he had seen me at the court and that I had read the charges.

Dolan, Mr. Roberts displayed the greatest anxiety at my failure to appear. "This thing must be fixed up to-day by hook or crook," he exclaimed. "Delay is dangerous."

He forthwith ordered a cab and drove four miles through a drizzling rain and in streets of slush to my home. Of course I was not prepared to talk with him. I knew his mission meant only one thing, and I did not care to put him in the position of being obliged to make me a definite offer. If Mr. Armour questions my honesty I would advise him that he had best keep his employees away from my home, for I shall resent in my own way any attempt to buy me off.

My reputation is perhaps as good as his for veracity and honor, and if he can prepare as many counts against me as I have against him let him proceed to do so.

Sunday night I took my family to the theatre in Boston, and at 9 o'clock, during my absence, a cab drove up to my house and another attempt was made to see me. I do not know who it was that called. But no one seems quite so anxious to see me just at present as Mr. Armour's agents.

I desire to state through the Journal that I have nothing whatever to say to the beef ring in any shape or manner. My affidavit stands just as it is written. I wish also to announce that if the court of inquiry requires me I can be found at No. 29 Bayard street, Alston, Mass., from which point I will answer a summons to Washington.

THOMAS F. DOLAN.

DOLAN MAY BE SUMMONED.

Washington, March 6.—The Court of Inquiry declined to announce to-day whether it would call Thomas Dolan, but there is good reason to believe that the importance of his testimony as developed in the Journal Saturday and to-day will oblige the court to make at least his affidavit a part of the record of the inquiry.

Copies of both statements of Armour's former superintendent of the killing department were submitted to the court with the view of calling its attention to the importance of the evidence. General Wade, the president, said on Saturday that he could not express an opinion on the merits of Mr. Dolan's charges until he had read his affidavit in full. To-day he was asked if the court had read the charges.

OVER-WORK MAKES WEAK KIDNEYS.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.
YOUR KIDNEYS ARE YOUR BLOOD PURIFIERS.

A Prompt Way to Cure Yourself When Symptoms Show That Your Kidneys Are Out of Order.

To Test the Wonderful Merits of the Great Modern Discovery, Swamp-Root, Every Reader May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Free by Mail.

The way to be well is to pay attention to your kidneys.

They are the most important organs of the body—the blood filters.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys strain or filter out the impurities in the blood—that is their work.

Purifying your blood is not a question of taking a laxative or physic.

Does your blood run through your bowels?

What the bowel-cleaner does is to throw out the poisons confined in your blood, but the poisons which are already in your blood, causing your present sickness, it leaves there.

There is no other way of purifying your blood except by means of your kidneys.

That is why bowel-cleaners fail to do their work—they forget the kidneys.

When you are sick, then, no matter what you think the name of your disease is, the first thing you should do is to afford aid to your kidneys by using Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney Remedy.

In taking Swamp-Root you afford natural help to nature, for Swamp-Root is the most perfect healer and gentle aid to the kidneys that is known to medical science.

Dr. Kilmer, the eminent physician and specialist, has attained a famous reputation through the discovery and marvellous success of Swamp-Root in purifying the blood, and thereby curing chronic and dangerous diseases, caused by sick kidneys, of which some of the symptoms are given below:

Pain or dull ache in the back or head, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness, dizziness, irregular heart, sleeplessness, sallow complexion, dropsy, irritability, loss of ambition, obliged to pass water often during the day, and to get up many times at night, and all forms of kidney, bladder and uric acid troubles.

Swamp-Root is sold by all dealers, in fifty-cent or one-dollar bottles. Make a note of the name, SWAMP-ROOT, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and remember it is prepared only by Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

To prove the wonderful merits of his great discovery he now offers to every reader of this paper a prepaid free sample bottle of Swamp-Root, which he will send to any address, free, by mail.

A book about Health, Diet and Disease as Related to your Kidneys and giving some of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from the sufferers cured, also sent free with the sample bottle.

The great discovery, Swamp-Root, is so remarkably successful that all should write for a sample bottle. Mention the Journal when sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

MACYS
R. H. Macy and Co.
Both Sides of 14th St. (Running from 13th to 15th St.), Sixth Ave.

Our Prices Always the Lowest.

No circumstances or conditions can exist that make it possible for competition to undersell us. "Giving better values than others" is the basic prop of this whole business. Macy's was begun, has succeeded and will be continued on that principle. Under every possible stress and exigency we sustain our well-known policy. If another dealer, as a sporadic expedient or experiment, cuts his regular rate on any line of goods to match ours, we immediately indulge in still larger reductions.

The market is watched with tireless vigilance, and whenever we find that a house, for mere sensational effect, has paralleled a price established by us, we cut under. A few items follow that will sell you—and others—thinking.
